Omegalodon is a free-roaming third-person multiplayer action game where players compete in team-based, real-time battles across the open world. Each round begins with players arriving at the edge of the map before they come to rest on a water-covered island. Players can then select from a variety of playable vehicles, including the Sharky, the Funky, the Bitch, the Wagon, the Bandit, the Jet, and the Helicopter to make their way towards the city. ONLINE BATTLE MODE As players make their way towards the enemy, the game will take a turn for the high-octane as players battle against each other in-game via the newest online battle system. Using a universal UI that will be implemented over all future games, players will be able to track all statistics, kill streaks, and just as importantly, join their friends in a thrill-seeking style competitive event. TWO PLAYER FIGHT If players fail to obtain the kill streak, players can still enjoy in an experience-based mode. Each player will have a hand-held button that will continue to attack the enemy. Furthermore, each player will have a special ability to use to make themselves feel better during the fight. IN-GAME MAP SCREEN Players will be able to see a three-dimensional map of the island they are playing on through a floating camera, and explore the levels to find vehicles, plants, and loot for their character. Furthermore, a camera over your head will allow players to access a mini-map. CYCLOPS STRATEGIC MAP The Omegalodon game will also feature a brand-new strategic map for players to battle for territories on. This map will feature a variety of houses that players can take. The houses can be attacked, and if it is destroyed, or the wall around it is broken, the owner can take it as their own. Eventually, the user will be able to build upgrades and structures in these houses. ADDITIONAL QUALITIES OF EXPERIENCE In addition to the excitement and fun of destroying equipment and engaging in battle, Omegalodon will also have a wide variety of qualities of experience that players will be able to unlock. These qualities of experience will include a special gold multiplier, new hair/head styles, new vehicle skins, and special effects. From today, all Tennant comics fans can download issues of Classic Doctor Who from the APTN app

What's new:

to Medical Students Forum columnist and Humanities teacher Dr. Elvi Hinko has the world's greatest job: teaching medical students, i.e. people with no formal knowledge of computer programs. Or rather, my students, while my colleagues call them twenty-two year old neurology majors. They'll be out of here in five years or so, if you're like me and haven't switched to the the new curriculum yet. (Remember, folks, this article is about a humanities teacher explaining Windows 10 to medical students. Some of them could be medical professionals in the future, while others could just be old-fashioned nurses, so that's the kind of person I'll be talking about.) In her lesson time, Elvi brings up a word I've always liked, though I don't often use it myself: education. "In my school, education is very prominent," she said, gazing around her open hospital room. "We have to look at education to understand and then we have to be educated to overcome our ignorance and learn." Most of the windows on Elvi's desk are covered, though the actual computer is still visible, open and in use. "Yes, your ACER is running simultaneously," she said. "It's a very demanding job." We were on a break, while my class was working on their rotating projects. "Maybe if you keep working, you'll get to use this one of these days," I suggested. "But not yet." Dr. Hinko wrote lots of programs to take care of her work, called them her "elviworks," and then logged into one to show me how to use my own ACER to run all her work at once, since she generally couldn't stand to have it sitting in front of her for more than five minutes at a time. When I got rid of my cursor to apologize, she turned towards me and smiled, as if I'd done it on purpose. "Oh, don't worry about it. I'm not upset." And, voila, the mouse was right back where it started. Most of my students at UA Birmingham spend their entire day in the hospital, and a lot of their days at home being patients, before they get to come in just to study and learn. One of the few things they
