Save the file, the name should be : BataDir..Q: Assign a global variable to all array elements I'm trying to iterate through the following array variable: $q = 'a'. $i.$chr(119)+'b'. $i.'c'. $i; $arr = array("a" => "ab", "b" => "BC", "c" => "abc"); I'm trying to replicate the value of $i by using a global variable $arr[$i]="value of $i" but this doesn't seem to work, the variable exists however. Is there a work around this? A: Use arrays for this sort of thing - global variables are just a pain. You can do the following: $i = 0; $q = "a{$i}b{$i}c{$i}"; $arr = array('a' => 'ab', 'b' => 'BC', 'c' => 'abc'); foreach ($arr as $key => $value) { $q = "{$key}"; } echo $q; // Prints "ab" EDIT: In answer to your comment - if you do that you will end up with a value of 1 in your global variable for the first time it loops - a quick, dirty way around this is to change it to a variable with a default and then reassign it to the appropriate value: $default = "default"; $i = 0; $q = "a$default{$i}b$default{$i}c$default{$i}"; $arr = array('a' => 'ab', 'b' => 'BC', 'c' => 'abc'); foreach ($arr as $key => $value) { $q = "{$key}"; $i++; } echo $q; // Prints "ab" This approach will work as long as you are careful not to exceed the number of keys in your array.
