Excel and pivot tables make it possible to organize and then access information in structured ways. Once an Excel spreadsheet has been created, the information can be sorted, filtered, and analyzed to identify trends, and make quick work of repetitive tasks. However, one of the most powerful features of Excel is to create additional worksheets based on data in the parent worksheet. When using the Create PivotTable Wizard, the user can be guided through creating the worksheet dynamically, making it much easier to use. Standard PivotTable To access the Create PivotTable Wizard, click on the pivot tables icon in the bottom left of the screen. You will then see the Create PivotTable Wizard shown in the image below. Once the Create PivotTable Wizard is displayed, you will be prompted to select where the pivot table will be placed. You can simply click Next and a blank sheet will appear, ready for use. The PivotTable can be created on any worksheet, and is listed on a menu at the bottom left of the pivot table sheet. You will then be prompted to name the pivot table. Simply type a name and press Enter. To add a summary row for each group, click the Arrow icon on the right side of the sheet. On the lower-left of the sheet, you will see the formula bar. Simply place the sum function on the RHS of the cell that is used to summarize each group, and then click OK. Your pivot table will now automatically add a summary row for each of the groups. The pivot table worksheet will now be displayed on the screen, and should look similar to the one below. The next step is to define the fields that will be used to populate the pivot table. By default, each field will be defined as a column, and the values in each field will be grouped by
