buku ekologi hewan pdf It will be used to visualize the high dimensional data as three-dimensional scatter plots. The 3D scatter plots will then be used to gauge the statistics for the relationships we are interested in, such as how sensitive the input variable (X) is to the target variable (Y). Biostatistics are applied to make sure that the new proposed method is statistically sound. The diagram below shows how we can obtain a first idea of the values for Y based on X. The blue line represents the actual data, the red line is the model line or predicted Y based on X. It is our approach that the higher the correlation, the better, while the less correlation, the worse. Is that a question? then, it is a research question which can be accepted. A research question is a question that is designed to be answered or investigated by a research study. There are many types of research questions. A research question can be categorized into three different types: 1. A descriptive research question is a question that seeks information about the characteristics of a situation, or the state of something as it exists. A descriptive research question includes the following types: A descriptive research question can be quantitative or qualitative. 2. A cause research question is a question that wants to learn something about cause and effect relationships (e.g. If exercise changes blood sugar levels, what is the cause? 3. A problem research question is a question that seeks information about a problem and its causes or consequences. A problem research question can be presented in many different ways. 4.
